On Sunday July 30, I will lead a field trip to Elda Castle in Ossining, NY. This abandoned castle, also known as Abercrombie Castle, was built by the retail store magnate of the same name. It is fascinating to enter the large stone building to photograph the picturesque ruins and the graffiti covered walls, windows, and doors.

There is another abandoned building on the property.

To get to the castle, we must walk about a quarter of a mile each way along a paved driveway.

This property does have a "No Trespassing" sign, but it is my impression that everyone ignores the sign.

If the group wishes, we can walk in the Sunny Ridge Preserve where, I am told, there are some other small ruins.

Also, if the group wishes, we can have lunch in a nearby diner.
